I asked for help, and he ignored me. I left it alone.

You accused him of using an event as a photo opportunity when in fact he has served the organization for over a decade.

That's a fact, not an accusation. I was contacted by someone on the subcommittee. They shared their experience with our mayor. They have tried very hard to get him involved in the events and fundraising they personally organized, but they were ignored. She also spoke to him the night of the event. He knows exactly who I'm referring to. Also, I never spoke of any family members. I'm reading the post this morning. Are you curious about my "accusations" of him not helping our local food pantries and homelessness crisis ?

I saved all correspondence and have all proof. I will be posting a response.

You realize his grandfather died of the disease and that he's been actively involved for over a decade. This is a man who deeply cares. Why won't you apologize for your outrageous statement?

My grandmother also died from the same disease. I never spoke ill of his grandfather. I would never.. Why is this the only part you're focusing on ? Homelessness and struggling food pantries don't matter to you ? I know my post included those topics as well.

I'd be happy to do an interview

Would you like you to simply give a straight answer to just one question: Can't you admit you were wrong to call it a photo opportunity when that's clearly false?

|Enter|

Werner, it's no secret that you favor our current mayor. I respect that you have the right to support who you want. However, my opinion that it was just a photo opportunity is not false. We all have our opinions, and my opinions are based on facts. I can admit when I am wrong and I take accountability when I should. However, I'm not wrong for having an opinion. I do, however, apologize if he felt like I was speaking ill of his grandfather. I never mentioned his grandfather..

You take care, Werner. I'm off for the day. Enjoy your weekend.

For the record, Gardner Magazine supports the City of Gardner, not any one person. It's challenging to communicate with you because there's so much nonsense thrown in with your opinions.

For the record, it's challenging to speak with you, also due to the nonsense on your end. I heard the last interview you did with me, and you forgot to add in the part where people were asking you to leave. You also threatened to call the cops and continued to instigate a fight with a resident who simply came to sign my papers. You also asked me to take a picture, I gave you the opportunity to take a photo. Instead, you waited until I was in an awkward position and took the worst possible photo you could get of me. You made sure to include it on your website. Had the roles been reversed, I'm not sure you'd even be talking to me right now. But I am forgiving, and I hold no grudges. Since your interview, I've done other interviews, and I will say you could take some notes. These people were professional, respectful, and a pleasure to work with. Take care 😊

Your interview included everything I recorded until I was asked by you to discontinue the interview. The threats made to me by some of your supporters and your threats to me if I dared to publish the interview were never revealed to the public until now. I use a walker and obviously did not interfere with anyone because it would be physically impossible for me to do so. Kimberly, you show a callous disregard for the truth, misrepresent the facts, and reveal a certain meanness and overt arrogance in many of your posts disagreeing with others online. Very scary, actually.
