Gardner, Massachusetts, also historically known as the "Chair City," has been dubbed the "Model City for America". This designation, highlighted in Gardner Magazine's Model City 2026 report, is due to significant advancements in infrastructure, a 41% reduction in crime since 2020, and successful community development projects.

Key details about Gardner as the "Model City for America":

- Progressive Governance: The city is recognized for its aggressive use of grants to fund infrastructure, such as water system overhauls and underground electrical work, as discussed in interviews with Mayor Michael Nicholson.
Revitalization: Gardner has focused on transforming vacant municipal buildings into housing and community spaces.
Community and Education: The city has strong partnerships with local education institutions, including Mount Wachusett Community College.
